mLogica, Inc, a database and business intelligence technology consulting company specializing in IBM and Sybase information management software, is set to incorporate Actuate software, including Actuate's BIRT-based commercial products in its Enterprise Data Management solutions. The solutions will be for mLogica's North America customer base, with a focus in the Western region.

mLogica's Enterprise Data Management offerings, coupled with its expertise in database design, modeling and management, address organizations' data governance, data privacy, data quality, and integrity challenges.

Actuate's RIA-ready information platform, running on iServer Express and iServer, will be closely integrated into mLogica's offerings to efficiently transform organizations' mission-critical data into meaningful information via productive web-based reports. These solutions will provide joint customers an effective way to manage and transform data and deliver real time, secure information for enhanced user experience and facilitate critical business decisions.

"Actuate's solutions, including our BIRT-based commercial offerings, enhance employee productivity and improve customer loyalty by enabling the entire organization to proactively get the information that they need in a timely manner, rather than simply operating in a reactionary mode," said Nobby Akiha, SVP of Marketing for Actuate Corporation. "By the use of Actuate technology, mLogica demonstrates their commitment to helping clients deploy Rich Internet Applications that help them achieve breakthrough corporate performance."

With the incorporation of Actuate offerings, mLogica will be able to continue to offer better implemented and managed mission critical business applications, databases and systems for large commercial enterprises and public sector organizations as well as mid-market businesses.

"mLogica's Enterprise Data Management offerings will be significantly enhanced with our relationship with Actuate," said Amit Okhandiar, President and CEO, mLogica Inc. "Actuate's formidable experience in delivering rich, dynamic Business Intelligence and reporting applications, in this case BIRT-based applications, can be adopted by many in our joint customer base, and we look forward to helping our customers achieve greater value."
