

Birbal

ModelSim® 6.0
More than enough runway to land your next big ASIC.

siliconindia

| | | | | | |
|-------------|-------------|---------|---------------|------------|-------------|
| Advertise | Magazine | Events | Bookstore | Newsletter | Immigration |
| Classifieds | Outsourcing | Charity | Jobs In India | Contribute | Community |

TRY 1 ISSUE FREE!

siliconindia
CAREER
FACTORY
2005

mLogica to focus on wireless tech

Thursday, May 05, 2005

PUNE: mLogica, the U.S. based solutions integrator has announced the opening of its software development center in Pune.

President and Managing Director, Amit Okhandiar said that the company development center would focus on Mobile and Wireless Technology, Remote Systems and Database Management and Enterprise Application Integration.

The company is already in a strategic partnership with iAnywhere Solutions for Mobile, Wireless, Database Management, Remote Systems with Sybase and Microsoft and for Application Integration with Niku and Xinify.

The company, which is only a year old, has achieved a turnover of $2 million in its first year. This is expected to become $8 million by next year, he said.

agencies

Print this article

Email this article

Write to editor

Faster Deployment

Save Over 50%
On Java™
Development Tools

Today's News

- PM says India has to pursue privatization
- Tiecon spawns new relationships
- Concerns over telecom decline in India
- India 53rd in gender inequality index
- India, Inc.'s wage bill soars by 17% in FY05
- Indian chemist wins Israeli prize

Technology

- Strike at Indian call center turns violent
- TZero appoints Richard Sekar VP of marketing
- SMBs contribute 40% of MS India's income
- Adobe to buy Macromedia's India center
- Indian website defacement up in April

Business

- Blackstone Group sets aside $1B for Indian firms
- World opens its arms to Indian tourists
- Retail sector to grow at six percent by 2010
- Survey estimates 23.85 M tons of Gold ores in India
- Foreign tourist arrivals cross 3 M